Select a Flattering Layout

Before any work is done on your kitchen, you'll have to think about its current and future layout. Always try to take advantage of the space you have available. Choose the Right Floor

Remember that kitchen floors tend to be exposed to food, heavy foot traffic, and other sources of contamination. Do yourself a favor and choose a floor type that looks great but is also easy to clean and maintain.

Allow a Good Amount of Natural Light

Natural light will make your kitchen look bigger, feel fresher, and reduce the use of artificial lighting. Add windows and glass doors whenever possible to fill the room with natural light.

Consider Ventilation

Most kitchens come equipped with an extractor fan, but you can also rely on natural ventilation to keep air flowing through your cooking space. Consider adding windows in strategic locations around your house to promote natural ventilation and draw fresh air into your kitchen.

Make Your Kitchen a Functional Heaven

As we mentioned before, designing a bigger kitchen is less complicated than tackling small spaces. For smaller kitchens, always try to declutter countertops and other areas while maintaining functionality. Adding handleless drawers and cupboards that blend in can also give your kitchen a simple and elegant look.

Get Creative with Your Decor

Your kitchen can either follow a scheme that you have set throughout your house or employ an independent decor style. Whatever you choose, get creative and add a bit of personality. Select the design before you remodel your kitchen if you want a specific look – for instance, exposed ceilings or different types of walls.

Make the Kitchen a Social Area

Traditionally, kitchens are used for cooking and storing food. However, by adding features such as a breakfast bar and casual dining areas, you can make it an intimate dining spot to share meals with your family and loved ones. It can also be a great way to make meals more about the company rather than putting pressure on your guests with a proper dining setting.
